Dear Reader,

Congratulations on taking a proactive step towards living the life you've always wanted. What you're about to learn are the secrets of success which most people NEVER discover in their lifetime.

Of course, you're probably curious as to how you've managed to come by this information in a simple ebook. If this information is so powerful, why isn't everybody talking about it?

The answer is simple...

Because most people are too busy voicing their own opinions about how life should be lived, and not enough people are willing to take the time to listen. What you're about to read is not being taught in schools, so most people grow up assuming that their conventional education is all that they need to get by in life.

When they find that something isn't working, they continue to apply this same strategy hoping that one day they'll get "lucky" and produce a different result. Either that or they blame some other person or exterior circumstance and thus continue to hang on to the beliefs which are actually causing them to take actions that aren't getting them what they want.

It's also typical of human beings to hang onto beliefs long after they have outlived their usefulness. Many people grow up in circumstances which cause them to develop irrational beliefs or defense mechanisms. However, once those circumstances have passed for their life, that person is left hanging on to the beliefs and behaviors which got them by for a time, but which are no longer useful in their new environment.

So believe it or not, in spite of the fact that this book is free most people will never benefit from the information in it for one reason: they don't believe that they need it. They're not actively seeking a solution because of the belief that what they already know is enough.

Thankfully, you've reached a point in your life where you're hungry for more than just the traditional knowledge about what it takes to be successful. You've probably heard it said that people who get exactly what they want out of life are either ridiculously rich, uncannily lucky, or both.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

But as you're about to discover in reading this book, getting what you want has nothing to do with how much money you have or how “lucky” you are. The sooner you accept this, the sooner you can put the genuine secrets of success into practice.

And believe me, when you do, you’ll have everybody telling you how lucky you are.

Enjoy.

Chapter 1: How the World Really Works

Everything that you “know” about living your life your way is probably wrong, and that's okay. After all, you can only go by the things that you've learned in your experience and education. You probably went to school just like every other person on the planet and learned the basic ABC's and 123's, a little bit about history, a little bit about art, and a little bit about a couple of other things you probably can't even remember.

You probably learned how to pass the tests and to please your teacher and parents, but you might not have the slightest idea as to how to really please yourself. You probably learned how to stay out of trouble with the authorities at your school, but might not have learned the principles of persuasion, influence and leadership.

You might have learned a little bit about the human body, but what you learned probably didn't help you to gain a healthy body. You probably studied about the great people of history, but you probably never learned how to live by the principles which made great.

Most important, you probably learned how to count money and to make change, but chances are you don't know as much as you'd like to about earning good money and building wealth.

In other words, what you learned in school did little to help you understand how the world really works.

Sound impossible?

Let's look at a few statistics:

Less than 20% of the world's population controls over 80% of the wealth.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

The majority of individuals living in highly industrialized societies are either overweight or obese.

The majority of people living in North America are living paycheck to paycheck...and that's one of the wealthiest areas of the world.

This is not to mention the nearly astronomical amount of consumer debt that plagues most working and middle-class people.

Now let's take an honest look at the circumstances of your life: do you have the relationships you really want?

Are you satisfied with your level of self confidence and inner peace?

Do you make enough money to have a reasonable amount of financial security and to buy the things you want?

Are you satisfied with the condition of your physical health?

And most important:

If you were to die tomorrow, what kind of a legacy would you leave behind in the hearts and minds of the people you love most?

If any of the above questions caused an unsettled feeling in your heart, a sense of dissatisfaction, shame or even guilt, then one thing is certain:

The rules which you learned to live your life according to aren't producing the results you really want.

As depressing as this might seem, it's actually a very good place to start when it comes to fulfilling your dreams and becoming your best self.

Why is this?

Because dissatisfaction presents you with an opportunity to change your approach and thus to get the results you really want. But this starts with accepting the fact that the way the world works is different than what you might now believe. If this were not true, you'd probably be a whole lot more satisfied with your life and have more of what you really want.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

So now that we have that out of the way, let's look at a few of the popular myths which keep people from getting what they really want:

Successful People are Lucky

There's no doubt that chance plays a role in all of our lives. There's no doubt that sometimes bad things happen to good people and that good things happen to bad people. But it's also true that billions of people go through their lives tolerating poverty, poor relationships and poor health because of something they call "bad luck."

In his best-selling book "Think and Grow Rich," author Napoleon Hill wrote about a series of experiments which was done to determine how "lucky" people got that way.

The results of the experiment proved that lucky people were simply those who remembered the good things that had happened to them and who focused on what they really wanted.

On the other hand, people with "bad luck" remembered mostly the bad things that had happened to them and focused on what they didn't want.

As you're about to learn, this alone is the most important difference between people who get what they want and people who don't get what they want.

Your Problems Are Other People's Fault

Most people who don't have what they want out of life will be quick to tell you exactly who or what caused their life to turn out that way. In other words, most people see themselves as victims of either circumstances or the choices of others, and thus neglect their own power to assert control over their own life.

Again, there is no doubt that chance plays a role in all of our lives and that we're sometimes directly or indirectly affected by the choices of others. But the most successful people in the world acknowledge that no matter what happens to them, they are always in control of who they decide to become as a result.

And that makes all the difference.

Rich People Are Either Greedy or Were Born that Way

This is probably the leading cause of poverty and financial misfortune. Believing that rich people are greedy makes it almost certain that you will never become rich yourself. After all, who wants to be seen as a greedy person? Not to mention that this belief will also keep you from seeking advice from wealthy people about how to make money and build wealth.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

Instead, you'll end up doing what the majority of people do: they take financial advice from other broke people and wonder why they stay broke. The belief that rich people were “born that way” is just as crippling. Over 80% of the millionaires in North America are first-generation rich. That means they built their wealth out of nothing.

There's no reason why you can't do the same. But first you have to let go of the myth that rich people have to be either greedy or born that way.

You Are Who You Are, You Can't Change

There's no doubt that genetics plays a role in our development and in our capabilities to perform certain duties in life. But there are also a lot of people who believe that they were born the way they are and that there's nothing they can do to change. For example, many people are shy or passive and believe that it's just the way they are.

The same is true with people's beliefs about their degree of willpower, self-reliance, creativity, discipline, assertiveness and many other character traits. Many people have problems with anger, poor health, low self-esteem, procrastination or timidity and believe that they are that way because of their parents, their nationality, their cultural upbringing and a whole slew of other things.

In reality, all of these character traits are a result of habits which a person has formed by a lifetime of repeated choices. Once these choices become a habit, people develop the crippling belief that these habits are no longer choices.

Your life and your habits are not products of your genetics or your circumstances; they are the product of your choices. And you're about to learn how to start making the choices which will make all the difference in living your life your way.

Chapter 2: Harness the Astounding Power of Thought

Have you ever given any thought as to just how powerful your thoughts are? Most people never do because of the fact that their thoughts aren't something they can reach out and grab a hold of. Most people believe that because of the fact that their thoughts occur in the privacy of their own mind, that they have no bearing on the reality of their outer life.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

As a result of this, many people greatly underestimate the power of their thoughts and thus never bother to learn how to control and focus their thoughts towards getting what they really want.

But the mind is an interesting place... it's a lot like a plot of land. If you don't make a proactive effort to plant and to nurture the seeds which will bring forth the kinds of plants you want, you'll end up with a lot of things that you don't want.

Most people's minds are full of negative and disempowering thoughts, not because they've chosen these thoughts, but because they've neglected to choose more empowering ones.

And where did these negative thoughts come from? Just look to the contents of the previous chapter and it becomes very clear. Your thoughts are a direct result of your past experiences, education and conditioning.

And it's these thoughts which influence your beliefs about how the world works, and those beliefs affect your interactions with the world. These interactions include: your relationships, your efforts to earn money and build wealth, your eating habits, your physical activities, and hundreds of other things which produce the results that make up your lifestyle.

Considering this, it's probably a good idea to give a second thought to just how important your thoughts are. Just imagine what kind of results you could produce in your life if you could begin to choose different thoughts that would build different beliefs about how the world works. Beliefs which would inspire different actions and get different results.

Results that you REALLY want.

And how can you choose thoughts which will lead to results that you really want? You begin by choosing thoughts which are consistent with what you really want. Now in case you believe you're doing this already, here's something to think about:

Most people have a much stronger idea of what they DON'T want, than what they do want. Just ask anyone what they really want from their job, their relationships, their financial life and their health. Chances are, they'll rattle off a lot of things that that they don't want.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

This is because they're always thinking about what they don't want. These thoughts are what influence their beliefs about how the world works. These beliefs affect their actions and those actions produce results which are consistent with the seeds which led to those actions: their thoughts.

Thoughts=Beliefs=Actions=Results

Now, here's a question to ask yourself:

What kinds of results are you going to continue to get in your life if your thinking never changes? All you have to do is look at the results you're getting, and there's your answer.

If you're ready to change this, then let's look at how your thoughts are produced and what you can do to begin to change them.

First of all, there are three kinds of thoughts: thought pictures (visual), "spoken" thought (auditory) ,and thoughts that you "act out" in your head (tactile).

For example:

Picture an elephant...that's a visual thought.

Read these words without speaking them aloud...that's an auditory thought.

Picture yourself driving your car...that's a tactile thought.

These are all thoughts which influence your external behaviors: the things you notice most easily, the words you speak, and the actions you take. These are all behaviors which can be changed by choosing different visual, auditory and tactile thoughts.

How is this possible?

It begins with understanding that the brain is a physical body part. There's nothing magical or spiritual about the brain or it's development. Just as you can condition other parts of your body through repetitious exercise, you can also condition your brain.

And just like physical exercise, when you first begin to condition your brain it will seem like an impossible task. Just think about the first time you tried to run a mile, or lift weights, or do some other kind of physical exercise which you'd never done before.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

At first, it might have seemed impossible. You probably even wanted to give up. But if you stuck with it, you probably found that it got easier and easier, until it became second nature.

A good example of this is when you learned to walk, talk or read. And just think about how easy those things are to you now. So as we look at a few exercises for conditioning your brain, remember that these are going to take some work and that they'll seem almost impossible at first.

But with enough practice you'll develop the natural habit of choosing thoughts that you really want. These thoughts will become beliefs, these beliefs will inspire actions and those actions will produce results which are consistent with what you really want.

Visual Thought Exercise

Get a poster board and start collecting pictures of things that you really want. You can find these pictures on the Internet, in magazines, and many other places. With these, you're going to create a "vision board." In addition to the pictures of what you really want, put a few pictures of yourself on your vision board as well.

This way you're actually training your mind to see yourself and the things you really want as part of the same picture. Put your vision board somewhere that you can see it every day, and make sure that you spend some time looking at it. With enough repetition, you'll begin to find that these images will become the dominating "thought pictures" in your mind.

You'll also begin to notice things throughout the day which are consistent with the things you really want. After enough practice, these new thoughts will begin to influence your actions and produce new results.

Auditory Thought Exercise

Sit down right now and write down three thoughts which are consistent with what you really want out of life. The best way to do this is to ask yourself which character traits you'll need to produce the results you really want. Once you've identified these characteristics, write them down somewhere that you can access them every day.

These are spoken affirmations which will help you to make your "spoken" thoughts consistent with who you must become in order to get what you really want.

Here are a few examples:

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

If you want to start your own business or land a better career:

“I am creative, self-reliant and persuasive.”

If you want to discipline yourself to take better care of your body:

“I am disciplined and self-reliant.”

If you want better relationships:

“I am funny, friendly and compassionate.”

Now in order for this exercise to work, you have to do it every day. For best results, speak each of your affirmations out loud in the morning and in the evening. Just like your vision board exercise, this exercise will begin to change your auditory thoughts according to what you really want. Those thoughts will change your beliefs, and those beliefs will produce actions which are consistent with who you must become to get what you want.

Now, you might notice that all of these affirmations have one thing in common: they're primarily focused on who you must become to get what you want.

Sure, you can also write out some that say things like:

“I'm healthy, thin, financially secure and I have great relationships.”

But if you focus instead on the characteristics and habits which will make you healthy, thin, financially secure and a great friend/partner, the results will naturally follow.

Tactile Thought Exercise

Tactile thought exercises are a little more complicated because they require the use of your entire body. But with a little bit of creativity, you can come up with ways to get physically involved what you really want. For example, the writer and success coach Jack Canfield once wrote about a party he attended called the “Come as You Will Be” party.

Each of the participants came as the person they wanted to be in five years. Some were international business consultants, some were public speakers and others were success coaches. Some of them even made up fake business cards to hand to their friends at the party.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

While it's important to remember that you also need to take action to get what you want, these kinds of "experiences" can help you to choose thoughts which will inspire you to action.

Here are a few examples of some things that you can do:

If you have a certain type of house you want to buy, spend some time driving around neighborhoods which have those types of houses. Take pictures or get out and take a walk in the neighborhood. As you do, pretend that you lived there and that your house is only a few blocks away.

If you have a car that you want to buy, go and take it for a test drive. Sit in the car and imagine yourself owning it. Really get into the experience until you can clearly recall it in your mind.

If you have an ambition to run a marathon, but you're only running a mile a day right now, picture yourself on the last of the 21 miles as you're running.

If you have an ambition to start controlling your eating habits, practice pushing your plate away while there is still food on it. Practice this several times in a row and as you do, imagine yourself thin and healthy.

These kinds of exercises, in conjunction with the auditory and visual exercises, will help you to get your mind "in shape." When you learn to do this, the rest of the exercises in this book will become easy.

Chapter 3: Know and Become Who You Really Are

As you know, the subtitle of this book states that you can fill your dreams by becoming your "best self." But what does it really mean to become your best self? What if you've never been this person before? What standard do you use to determine what characteristics to shoot for? How do you know if you're aiming to high... or too low?

How do you even know who your best self is or how you can become that person?

The answer is that becoming your best self is more about getting rid of things which are in the way.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

Think about this, becoming who you really are should never feel forced or awkward. Instead, it will feel completely natural in every way. You'll feel at home in your own skin. You'll no longer feel that you're an imposter who's trying to "fake it till they make it."

But it starts with understanding the things which are keeping you from discovering your true self. Let's look at a few of them:

Other People's Opinions

Everyone has opinions about the way that things should be, and that's okay. But you should never feel that your life and your choices are at the mercy of other people's opinions. As you're reading this, you can probably think of at least a few people who have an opinion about who you should be or what you should do with your life.

Sometimes these opinions are negative, and sometimes they are positive. But one thing is certain...

These opinions have nothing to do with who you really are.

They simply represent people who are realizing their own perception of you. At times, these opinions can be positive. But if they aren't a genuine representation of who you honestly believe that you are, they can be a hindrance towards you becoming your best self.

Imitation has never caused anyone to become great. Even if you're imitating someone you admire and respect, you're never going to be as good at being someone else as you can be at being yourself. You're not responsible for becoming anybody but the person you want to be, and that's a decision you, and only you, can make.

You're also not responsible for other people's opinions or perceptions of you, whether those opinions and perceptions are good or bad. The only thing you're responsible for is being true to yourself and who you know yourself to be.

No matter who you become, for better or worse, somebody somewhere is always going to have a negative opinion about it. That's not your problem, it's their problem, and it's their responsibility...so leave it at that.

Your Weaknesses and Doubts

Everyone has things about themselves which give them doubts, just as they have things which they are confident about. Everyone also has things which they don't do so well,

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

just as they have things that they do well. The person you become in life is dependent upon whether or not you focus on your strengths or your weaknesses.

Yes, it's important that you examine the areas of your character that you need to change in order to get what you want. But it's better to focus on a specific plan of action for correcting the weakness than to focus on the weakness itself.

Think of it like this: if you're constantly focusing on masking your weaknesses and insecurities or feeling ashamed, it's as if you're placing a magnifying glass over them. As this happens, they become the predominating thoughts in your mind until they begin to affect your self-image and your beliefs. Those beliefs affect your actions and those actions create your results and lifestyle.

Sound familiar?

And in case you're wondering whether or not other people recognize this, they do. In fact, it's probably more obvious than you think it is. That's the bad news.

The good news is that your strengths are the same way. If you're constantly focusing on developing the strong points of your character, it's as if you're placing a magnifying glass over them. As this happens, they become the dominating thoughts in your mind and they begin to form your self-image and your beliefs.

These beliefs begin to influence your actions, and those actions reinforce your beliefs and create your lifestyle and your identity.

And the final thing which will keep you from knowing and becoming your best self...

Your Current Results

As you're considering the fact that your thoughts create your beliefs and your self-image, that your beliefs influence your actions, and that your actions form your lifestyle and identity, it might be easy to feel bad about yourself if you're not happy with your current results.

But it's important to remember that the current circumstances of your life are a representation of who you were, not who you are. If you begin today to focus on becoming a different person, you can be certain that your current results will change, but first you have to let go of the idea that those results represent who you are.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

In fact, it's important that you don't ever allow the exterior circumstances of your life to fine your self-image and identity. If you do, you're self image and confidence will vacillate just as the circumstances of your life do. Better to develop a rock solid self-image based on a standard which you and you alone determine.

This will help you to endure any difficulty in your life and keep your actions consistent with your true values instead of allowing them to be influenced by circumstances. Now let's look at a few things you can begin to do today in order to become your best self...

Decide What YOU Really Want

Sit down and make a list of what you really want in your financial life, your health, your relationships and your career. Don't stop for a second to think about how you are going to achieve these things, that's not the purpose of this exercise.

The purpose of this exercise is to build self understanding based on what YOU really want to life. As you do this, you'll discover that your deepest desires are the most accurate representation of what's in your heart. So the better your understanding of them is, the better you're going to get to know your best self.

As you do this, it's important to be honest. Don't worry about what other people might think...again, that's not your problem. Don't worry if others believe that your dreams are: stupid, unrealistic, selfish or immoral.

Again, their opinions only represent the experiences and perceptions of who you "should" be or how you "should" live. These people are not responsible for living your life or making the most of the God given gifts which you have.

You're the only one who's responsible for becoming your best self and pursuing your dreams. No one else is ever going to do that for you, and it's unfair to expect them to.

In addition, don't allow your weaknesses or insecurities to get in the way of you deciding what you want and don't allow your current circumstances to influence you. If you do, you'll probably only end up with more of what you have right now.

Decide What You're Going to Give in Return for It

You're never going to get something for nothing. Anyone who tells you differently is selling something. As you're determining what you want in your financial life, your health, your relationships and your career it's important that you decide what you're going to get in return for it.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

If your dreams are big in any of these areas, your commitment to taking action must be equally big. If not, you'll end up falling short of your goal or you'll reach it only to find that you can't keep it.

For example, if you decide that there is a certain type of person you'd like to attract into your life, ask yourself what kind of a person you'll need to become in order to attract them and build a meaningful relationship.

If you want to have a certain amount of financial security and to work your dream career, determine what you're willing to sacrifice in order to get what you want.

And finally, if you want to be thin and in good health, determine what you're willing to give in return for your ideal body. Every year millions of desperate people spend billions of dollars on weight loss pills and fad diets, only to find that they've wasted their time, money and hope on these quick fix solutions.

Similar mistakes are made in the way that people pursue their ideal career, their ideal relationship and the acquiring of financial security.

The sooner you accept that there is no shortcut to good health, financial security, great relationships and a good career, the faster you'll be able to get to work on a practical plan of action for achieving them.

Which is the next step...

Write Out a Plan of Action

This step is very simple, but most people never bother with it because they think that it's enough to know what they want. It's not enough. Sit down and write out a specific plan of action as to how you're going to make the changes you need to make in order to get what you want.

As a part of your overall plan, include the thought exercises from the previous chapter. This will help you to become the person who you need to become in order to get what you want.

Most important: WRITE YOUR PLAN DOWN

Your plans are going to change as you begin to put them to work. You're going to need to measure what's working and what's not working and correct course. The only way to do this is to keep a written record of your plan so that you can go back to it and revise it.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

There's no such thing as tomorrow when it comes to getting what you want. You have to take action, and the only time that you can take action is right now. You can think about tomorrow and you can dream about tomorrow, but that's all that you can ever do with tomorrow. The same is true with the past.

If you've gotten into the habit of putting things off until later, you've allowed yourself to neglect one immutable law of success:

Nothing happens without action, and action can only happen right now.

If you have a habit of indecision or procrastination, just remind yourself of this every time the temptation comes to put things off: there is no later. There is only now, anything short of this and you qualify as a dreamer.

Chapter 4: Master Your Mindset

As you begin to put your plan of action into practice, you're going to find that fear and uncertainty cloud your mind and make it difficult for you to stay focused on your goal. In fact, most often it seems that a negative mindset based on fear and uncertainty is completely voluntary and there's nothing you can do about it.

But there's actually a lot that you can do about it.

The first thing is to make a consistent practice of the thinking exercises which we've already covered. The second thing is to have a clear picture of what you want and a solid plan of action for achieving it.

But the third principle of mastering your mindset is the one which most people struggle with. That principle is learning to control the automatic thoughts and emotions which come as the results of negative circumstances.

You've probably experienced something like this before. You have a clear idea of what you want and are taking action towards achieving. Then one day something happens which completely takes the wind out of your sails and your motivation starts to dissipate.

What causes you to lose your motivation is not what's important. What's important is your response to it and to the sudden change in your mindset and your emotional state.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

<http://personaldevelopmentmaster.com/go/mindmovies.php>

In other words, do you view such occurrences as obstacles or as opportunities to learn something and to build new plans of action based on what you've learned?

Think about this: the difference between a problem and an opportunity is your response to it. Every problem carries with it the seeds which you can plant towards the achievement of your goal and of becoming your best self:

In order to understand and to live this difference, you must understand the three opportunities that every negative circumstance in your life presents:

To Teach

Problems are great teachers and so are failures. In fact, they are often better teachers than success. Just think about the last problem or failure you were faced with in your life... did you learn anything from it? If not, stop and think about the problem again and ask yourself what lesson you missed.

The more that you learn to do this, the more you'll be able to view negative circumstances as opportunities instead of obstacles. It will also help you to become wiser about your future choices, which is where the second opportunity comes in...

To Test

Every time something negative happens to you, a choice is presented: you can either allow it to make you a better person or a worse person. Therefore, every negative circumstance is a test as to whether or not you're going to grow through it or allow it to chip away at your self-confidence and your motivation to pursue what you really want.

If you choose to become a worse person because of a negative circumstance, then you've allowed the circumstance to defeat you. If you choose to become a better person, then you've defeated the negative circumstance. If you make the choice to become a better person, you're free to take advantage of the third opportunity which it presents...

To Motivate

As you're considering the fact that every negative circumstance provides you with an opportunity to learn and to become a better person, it's easy to see why a negative circumstance can be motivating. If you choose to take advantage of this motivation and to press forward with greater wisdom, enthusiasm and determination, you can turn the negative circumstance into a positive one.

Think about this: it's human nature to become complacent and comfortable when things are going well. The problem is that this doesn't allow us to grow and to continue to reach beyond our comfort zone and experience new things. Even the most splendid and self-motivated person needs negative circumstances in order to challenge and motivate them to learn and to grow.

So as you're executing your plans to live your life your way, remember these three things and treat every circumstance as an opportunity to refine your plans, to grow, and to continue on your journey towards living your best life.

Now, as you're reading this, you're probably wondering how you can get the resources that you need to execute your plans: the time, the money, the knowledge.

But there's one other resource which is far more important that you'll need to live your life your way...

Chapter 5: Conditioning Your Mindset for Your Ideal Body

No matter what your goal is, there's one thing you're going to need in order to achieve it: physical energy. Think about it: even thinking requires energy, and the more energy you have, the easier it will be for you to gain control over your thoughts.

How many times have you known that you need to do something, but you were just too tired? How many times have you sat down in front of the TV because you lack physical or mental energy required to do anything else?

How many times have you tried to exercise or to get up early in the morning, but lacked the physical energy? Like it or not, these are all signs that the condition of your physical body is insufficient for achieving what you really want.

Above time, above opportunity, above knowledge and above even money, physical energy is the one source which you MUST have in order to fulfill your dreams to become your best self.

So what can you do about this? Well, there are two things which you're probably already aware of: proper diet and regular exercise.

Harness the power of visualization to make your dreams your reality:

Yes, there are people selling solutions for developing your ideal body which don't require you to diet or to exercise. But the bottom line is that your body is a natural system and these solutions aren't grounded in natural principles.

If you want to achieve your ideal body, you need a diet and activity level which supports the building of an ideal body. But what if you don't have the energy, the discipline or the willpower to even get started doing these? Isn't that where most people run into trouble?

Yes, and that's because there's one more primary thing which you must do in order to form habits which will lead to a great body and a greater energy level. That one thing is developing an ideal state of mind and beliefs which will naturally lead to actions which change the physical condition of your body.

Without first developing this kind of an idea mind, you'll end up sabotaging or giving up on all of your efforts to get your body in shape.

So how can you develop the ideal mindset required to achieve a healthier and more energetic body? Here are three things you can begin to do today:

Value Your Body

Think about this: the body you're living in has to last you for the rest of your life. It's the one thing which you depend on to provide you with the energy to do everything that you need to do to enjoy the life you've always desired. If you don't take care of your body, every single area of your life is going to suffer as a result.

You'll lack the focus and discipline required to do well in your career and to manage your relationships. You'll lack the physical energy to squeeze every ounce of potential out of every moment of your life. In short, having an unhealthy body and an energy level which is not consistent with your full potential is a direct hindrance to living your life your way.

Also, the way you care for your body is going to determine the quality of your life and your physical independence more and more as you get older. Your body cannot be replaced at any price, and the benefits which it provides you with are priceless.

Think about this the next time you decide to put junk in your body or to neglect physical activities which will encourage you to have a healthy body. This will help you to value your body and to begin caring for it better.

Acknowledge Your Mortality

Your body is a natural system and it governs itself according to natural principles which you have no control over. The only thing that you can control is whether or not you align your physical health habits with these principles. The most important of these principles is the fact that your body is not going to last forever.

It's going to age, it's going to fall apart and one day it's going to stop. As depressing as this might sound, many people age, fall apart and die MUCH earlier because of the fact that they don't acknowledge the mortality of their body.

They neglect the simple principles of routine exercise, healthy diet and restful sleep as if their body were indestructible. But it's only a matter of time before this neglect begins to take a physical toll on the person.

When it does, most people regret that they didn't start taking care of their body earlier in life and prevent the conditions which cause the eventual deterioration of their health.

So acknowledge the mortality of your body and begin caring for it accordingly...

Learn About Your Body

As a commitment to conditioning your mind, make it a point to learn about your body: how your diet affects its functioning, how your activity and lifestyle impacts your body, and any other thing which will raise your awareness about the importance of caring for your body.

Most people who have unhealthy habits are completely unaware of how those habits affect their physical body. This ignorance causes them to develop these health habits and it keeps them from developing a sense of urgency about changing them.

But as soon as you start learning about how your body really works, you'll begin to develop a new appreciation for how valuable it is. You'll also develop a stronger sense of your own mortality. Both of these will motivate you to get your body into a condition which will provide you with the physical energy required to pursue your dreams with enthusiasm and perseverance.

Then you'll be ready to learn and apply the three biggest secret to getting what you want.

Chapter 6: The Three Biggest Secrets to Getting What You Want

The biggest secret to getting what you want (no matter what it is that you want) can be summed up in three sentences:

Never give up.

Never give up.

Never give up.

As simple as this advice sounds, what you just read was one of the last speeches that Winston Churchill ever gave in his lifetime. He got up in front of the audience, spoke these three sentences, and walked off. Considering all the things that this man had accomplished in his life and all of the wisdom which he shared with the audience, he chose only these three words.

Why is this?

Because he probably learned that the leading cause of “failure” in any endeavor was the decision to accept failure by giving up. You’ve already read that every negative circumstance carries with it the opportunity to learn, to become a better person and press on towards the achievement of your dreams.

Considering this, it's easy to understand that the only way to truly “fail” at something is to fail to learn, to fail to grow and to fail to press on. Giving up is failure. Everything else is simply the opportunity to develop the skills which will eventually lead to success.

The Nobel Prize winning scientist Neil Bohr said that an expert is nothing more than someone who has failed many times within one narrow field. Just think about what this means when it comes to Winston Churchill's advice to never give up.

It means that if you continue to learn, to grow and to persist, that you’ll eventually develop the status of an expert. That is, provided that you know exactly what it is that you want...which is a clue to the second biggest secret of success:

Focus-Focus-Focus

Even if you refuse to give up, it is possible to miss out on living your life your way. All that you have to do is have your attention and interest scattered and several different directions instead of focused on one thing. Lack of focus is a common problem which every person must master.

Many people never get what they want out of life because they never determine what they really want. And they never determine what they really want because their attention is scattered in too many different directions.

Think about this: a laser beam is nothing more than light which is focused towards one central point. Lasers have the power to cut through almost any substance in existence. This ought to give you an idea of just how important it is to focus your energy on one central goal.

If you do this, and if you never give up, there's only one more thing you'll need to do to live your life your way...

Never Stop Learning

Eric Hoffer once said that in times of drastic change the learners will survive while the learned would find themselves well equipped to deal with a world that no longer exists. This is probably one of the wisest things which has ever been said when it come to achieving your full potential.

There is no such thing as standing still in life. The world around you will always be moving ahead, and by standing in one place you're choosing by default to be left behind. The commitment to lifelong learning is one of the wisest and most rewarding commitments you will ever make.

You've taken the first step by reading this e-book, but don't stop here. Continue to use and to apply the information you've learned here. Read the book again and again and continue to put these things into practice.

Find more resources to learn from and do the same with them. The more you do this, the clearer you are about what you really want, and the more persistent you are, the greater your rewards will be.
